A Southern Journalist Thinks the flog a Joy Forever.

At a dinner the other night, after the rash had been disposed of, two roast pigs, each with an apple in his mouth, were brought in and set in front of the host and hostess. I had not seen such a thing in years, but it was a savory reminder of many a lavish board under which my youthful legs had twined about each other in cestacy. There's a good deal of sentiment in the memories that hang about the hog. Where is there a festival that compares in solid enjoyment with "hog-killing time" on an old plantation? How many a time have I sat on the warm side of a big fire in the cold of a December dawn and licked my half-frozen chops as I watched the sleek carcasses being drawn and quartered or hung over the huge scalding-pot, like a young Macbeth over the witches' cauldron!

pot, like a young Macheth over the witches' cauldron!

The late Senator Hill loved nothing so well as a plate of chitterlings. I have seen Gov. Herschel M. Johnson eat a pig's ear with infinite relish. What were Governor Brown's collards (I refuse to spell it coleworts) to that great and good man if underlying his historic love for this fine esculent there was not an unconfessed love for hog's jowl? I once saw General Gordon rushing through Wall street, when we both had more stocks than was healthy, with a bucket of hog's brains that he had bought from a down-town butcher for his table at the St. James. Governor Stephens dotes on broiled ham, and the nearest to death General Toombs ever came was from indigestion caused by overeating of head-cheese; so that a little more hog's head might have prevented secession. More than one historian holds that Lee's army was never whipped until the bacon had given out and it had to fall back on beef. Mayor English frequently greases his distinguished chin with fatty bread, and it was at the Governor's table that I saw the suckling pigs that evoked this train of memories.—H. W. Graely, in Atlanta Constitution.

There died near Nebraska City, a few days ago, a young girl about tour-teen years of age, who came to her death literally through fright. While death literally through fright. While riding a horse to school she passed a neighbor's house, when severaldogs ran out and began snapping and barking at the horse's heels. The animal dashed away, at which the girl became so excited and frightened that she would have fallen to the ground had not one of her brothers caught the horse and assisted her to alight. She was unable to stand, and could scarcely speak. She was conveyed to her home at once, where she died in less than an hour.—Chicago Tribune.

—James O'Neill died recently at Stockton, Cal., leaving an estate valued at $5,000. When it came to settlement two widows of the deceased appeared on the scene as claimants. One of them was Eliza Curry, whom O'Neill married in Ireland in 1851, and with the other claimant he entered the matrimonial yoke in San Francisco in 1864. The matter was intrusted to a jury, who gave a verdict in favor of the woman who was made a wife in San Francisco.

No wosters the trule is a kicker. Were I a mule, I, too, would kick. I know what kind of mule I would be. A bay mule. One of those sadeered old fellows that lean back in the breeding and think. With striped legs like a zebra. And a dark streak down my back and a paint-bush that. And my mane cut short, and my foretop hanced and I'd be worth two hundred and a half in any market, and some dow when some man hitched me up to a dray, and piled on a ton and a half of pig fron, a cod of wood six but is tress of flour and a steamboat boiler, I would st rt off with it patently and half it steamly until I got to the top of the grade on the road around North Hill, and then a falling maple less, fluttering down, would scare me all but to death, and the authorities would have to sing the Mississipi River six weeks to find all of that load and some of the driver, while in three minutes after the emerce I would be tranquilly browsing on the grassy heights that smile above the silver, flowing river. That is the kind of a mule I would be - Backington Hasekeys.
